

To Whom It May Concern:

Please wake up to the fact that violent programming is responsible for stimulating violence in the real world. The American Psychological Association and the American Academy of Pediatrics have proven this through their research. How many CSI-type shows do we need to see before we are completely numb to violence and cruelty? Is it really good for our society to have television programs that glorify serial killers? The FCC has a duty to protect American children and immature adults (at least a third of our parents) from such sadistic fare. Perhaps we can at least demand that cable and satellite dish companies offer family friendly, lower cost packages. I should not have to support with my dollars what I consider to be evil and destructive programming. Thank you for your attention.

Robert Baggett

National Board Certified Guidance Counselor